SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

We respectfully submit this our first annual report to the citizens of the town of Hopkinton.

The new environment and conditions have made very rapid work almost impossible. We were able, however, to get on the field early and make a few plans to put into operation at the opening of the fall term. What we have done has been suggested by the needs observed, and made possible through the co-operation of the teachers, school officials, and the people interested.

Five rural one-room schools and the village schools at Hopkinton and Contoocook have been maintained during the year. The Hopkinton high school, approved by the state department, has provided secondary instruction for the pupils of the town and for a few from neighboring towns.

Two hundred and sixteen pupils have been generally regular in attendance. Of these 112 are boys and 104 girls; 61 are in grades one to three inclusive, 59 in grades four to six, 43 in grades seven and eight, and 53 in high school. There are about 25 retarded pupils in the grades, but none in the high school. About 50 pupils are young for the grades in which they are found. About 20 of these are found in the high school. The teachers have been trying, by individual instruction and adjustment of text-books, to awaken the most marked cases of retardation with, we believe, some success. Many of the immature children found in high school are doing the work, but would be able to do better work if they were older, and still have sufficient time to prepare for definite work in life. Without doubt, this condition has been caused by congestion in the grades at Contoocook. A new arrangement of the pupils was made at the beginning of the year, which, we hope, will partially remove the difficulty. Promotions should be determined by the development of the child and the work covered. The number in the room and the desire of parents can not well be considered. To give the pupils a better preparation for high school and for life it seems advisable to increase the work of the grades and to give the teachers more time, that they may be able to cover the program of studies more fully and carefully. With pupils entering at five years of age, a year of but thirty weeks, and eight years below the high school, it is difficult to properly prepare pupils for high school unless they are held back somewhere or started later in life.

All of the teachers, we believe, have been graduates of high school, while five have either attended or are graduates of normal school. The high school teachers have been graduates of colleges of recognized standing, with special training and experience.

We appreciate the spirit manifested by the teachers in giving, in nearly every instance, their support, and that of the school board also in favoring a progressive educational policy. A new school building has been erected at West Hopkinton, a model of rural school architecture. Some needed repairs have been made and improvements in text-books and materials for the development of the schools are well under way.

From our observation in the schools we have noted an increase in the interest of both pupil and teacher in their work. There has been a willingness manifested on the part of the teachers to work for their schools and their own development.

The teachers have been aided by advice given at the time of our usual visit, once about every three weeks, and growing out of the observed needs of the teacher and school. Much of the help has been in the form of personal interview, but illustrative teaching has been used where it has seemed advisable. The circular letter has been distributed whenever the need has seemed general. A new edition of the state Program of Studies has been distributed to the teachers, which has helped in systematizing the work and in grading the pupils.

The text-books introduced have been principally material for reading, both basal and supplementary. In the choice of text-books the needs of the schools have been considered in every case. There is a need not yet met to any great extent: reference books for the teacher's desk and books for home reading to create a desire for good literature.

A record of the text-books in each school is being kept, and a record book showing the progress of each pupil as shown on their report cards and the work covered with some of the written work of the pupils is now in each school.

It is best that the work done should be shown by the schools themselves. That is of but little value, which will not show in the pupil at home or on the street. Trusting that the work has shown in the product, we leave the record of the things done and would look toward the future.

It seems commonplace to say that children should have the best possible equipment to fit them for life in their own environment. They must be fitted for the general educational scheme, which leads to normal school, college and professional school. As but few pupils will attend these, it seems advisable that greater attention be given to the larger portion who stay at home and must fit into the industrial life of the community.

We have in mind the introduction of the work outlined in the state course in manual training for the boys from the sixth grade into the high school, possible at Contoocook and in the larger rural schools; the introduction of the course in sewing for the girls in the same grades; and later, a course in cooking at Contoocook, beginning with the seventh grade and extending into the high school in the form of domestic science. To meet this increased demand upon the time of pupil and teacher, we suggest a longer year in the grades and the strengthening of the work in teaching and equipment.

In the high school it seems advisable to meet the industrial demands in a way which has been brought to your attention, by the introduction of the approved agricultural course, made stronger, however, on the mechanical side to fit those who do not live on the farm and will go into other employment. The size of the high school is such that Superintendent Morrison advises the hiring of a second assistant another year. The salary of this teacher would be about five hundred dollars, if a lady, while that of the man needed for the industrial work would be from eight hundred to one thousand dollars. The sewing can be done by the regular teachers, together with the music, until the time when regular teachers of these subjects can be secured.

The work in the outside schools, under the direction of the special teacher and superintendent, will need for equipment a bench, tools and some material. The pupils would furnish most of the material for sewing and the larger pieces of wood-work. In the school at Contoocook, it would be necessary to finish the attic with the addition of a dormer window toward the south to provide a room for manual training and agricultural laboratory. It may be necessary to hire a half-acre of land for field work. The equipment need not be expensive, and it seems that the cost of the additional work would be small in comparison with the increased efficiency of the schools. From our observation elsewhere and a study of the territory from which these courses would draw, it seems highly probable that the tuitions will soon nearly cover the additional running expenses.

I submit these plans for your consideration, believing that we have a common interest and desire,—the best schools we can afford for our children.

E. J. Best,
Superintendent.
